Specials
The oil painting sent to the fair by a Dunnellon lady, whose name the writer failed to learn, elicited much praise.
Mrs. Sloan Lovell of Sparr exhibited two pairs of woolen gloves, knitted from wool cut from Florida sheep, raised by Mrs. Lovell.
The elegant hand-painted sofa pillow, and the water color paintings of Mrs. Frank Drake were greatly admired.
Little Miss Irma Blake's embroidered dress received many compliments.
Mrs. Otis Green's oil paintings added greatly to the attractiveness of the woman's room.
Alice Colbert, the six year old daughter of Mr. W. L. Colbert, made a calico quilt top for the fair. The sewing was excellent.
Among the curiosities were two exquisite Mexican shawls, owned by Mrs. Tydings of this city.
The beautiful toilet set made by Miss Catherine Pyles, the twelve year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Pyles, was a work of art.
Miss Josephine Bullock remembered the fair by sending one of her beautiful oil paintings, "An Indian Girl." Miss Bullock is attending school in Nashville, Tenn., and is making a specialty of oil painting. She is an artist of unusual ability.
Mrs. Bostick's hats and Mrs. Aiken's dolls were among the beautiful things to be seen in the Woman's Department.
Mrs. W. L. Colbert had a cabinet of unique curios among her exhibits.

THE CIRCUS
It Has Lost None of Its Attractiveness and Pleased All Who Witnessed It—Was One of the Old Time Kind and Was Good Throughout
Unless there is some great transformation in the evolution of man the circus will continue to be popular and attract its thousands.
Howe's Great London Shows arrived in Ocala on time and was the largest aggregation of the kind seen in this city in many a day.
The parade was a revival of those of the olden time and was all the better for it. There were the horseback riders in costume and tinsel, the funny clowns, the band wagons, the steam caliope, the lioness and the baby lions, the camels and the elephants, ten all told, and then came leopards and other animals and other attractions, the horses in the parade numbering sixty-five. Great crowds of people lined either side of the streets to witness the gorgeous pageant.
The circus itself bore a strong resemblance to those so popular in the "olden time," and lost nothing for going back to first principles. There was a spring, snap and sparkle to the actors and actresses that gave a piquancy to each act, and though the performance was long nothing dragged, and even the little tots failed to grow weary.
It is a clean show and well worth the price of admission.
Mr. Rhodes, the press agent, was exceedingly thoughtful and clever, and treated the newspaper fraternity with great consideration.
The show goes from here to Dunnellon, and on down the peninsula. It will exhibit at Tampa on the ninth and will go into winter quarters at Jacksonville about Christmas time.

The reason that there are not so many divorces in the south as in the north, is because as a rule the people of the south are not so rich. The poor, even when illy-mated, cannot afford the luxury of a divorce. It is hard enough to provide for one home, much less two, and the children must be cared for. Then, there's the alimony. A divorce is too costly to be indulged in by the poor. So they are forced to "bear those ills they have rather than fly to others they know not of."

One of the most brilliant of the winter social events in Jacksonville will be the wedding of Miss Eleanor Cassidy, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Dell Cassidy, and Mr. Edward Fitzgerald King, which will take place on December sixteenth. Miss Cassidy spent a short time in Ocala several years ago as the guest of Miss Sally Camp.

Prohibition in Alabama
After one of the most exciting political contests that has been waged in Alabama since the mammoth campaign of 1860, the prohibition fight culminated Tuesday in a landslide in favor of the anti-prohibitionists. The ants expected to win, but not by such an overwhelming majority.

THANKSGIVING THOUGHTS

The springtime is promise; the autumn fulfillment. The beautiful month of November is the harvest time. It is the time of reaping that which has been sown. The fruits are being harvested. Therefore after the waiting time, when fair faith and hope beckon onward, it is very meet that we should give thanks for all blessings. Every day is a Thanksgiving day, and the habit of thankfulness should be ours, and it is true that the more we remember blessings the more we have. One day of thanksgiving a year would do little good to him who registers a series of complaints and frowns all the other days in the year. But the government in setting aside one special day for this purpose, has added one more American blessing for which to give thanks. So we shall be thankful, first of all, for Thanksgiving Day, the day which stands for a thankful spirit. It is the day of feasting and joyousness, and every truly happy and appreciative thought is a prayer.

Even in the saddest life there are many causes for thankfulness. Many bright spots may be found to lighten the darkness, if only they are looked for. Even sorrows are sometimes blessings in disguise. Let us, then, be even thankful for these, for they can help in the truest development of character, of heart and soul. If one is in need of sympathy and help one does not go to those whom fortune has always favored—but to those who like one's self have suffered—and won. To the man and woman who understands. One of the greatest causes for a thankful spirit is the possession of friends—the old and the new. And best of all, nothing changes true friendship. We know that in happiness and troubles alike they are our comrades—these friends who are worthy of that sacred name and who always are ready with a smile or a warm hand clasp to render the summit less hard to climb. If friends were even the only blessings it would be sufficient to take up the entire day for rejoicing.

But this is only the beginning. As friendships are the beginning and foundation of all blessings in life, of religion, and of all that is good, it is right that they should be given the most important place. The universal friendship and charity to the whole world was first and always taught by the great teacher, the Christ.

For wholesome sincerity we shall be thankful also. There is something about this virtue which compensates for deficiencies in other things. The word sincere is made of two words—sine meaning without, and cere meaning wax—without wax, transparent and pure. Sincerity inspires confidence, and we are thankful for those in whom we may have confidence. Is not the American Thanksgiving a very wonderful thing?

Part of the routine of the Thanksgiving Day is the dinner, when all the dear ones are happily gathered around the table at mother's or grandmother's. Of all the steaming delicious dishes, the turkey seems the greatest in importance. Then such pumpkin pie and mince pie, plum pudding and all the other dishes tradition has handed down to us for the feast. We will give thanks for the homes, where the old fashioned dinner breathes the spirit of true thankfulness. The table, of course, is adorned with fruits and grain and the corn which has been shrouded in mystery and suspicion by the pellagra alarm, will at least serve splendidly in decoration of the table and room.

Then, when Thanksgiving Day is nearing its end, the family gathers around the old fashioned fireplace, with its cheerily flaming logs, if the evening happens to be cool, if not, the ever comfortable porch is used. Then the old days are talked over in a heart to heart way, which promotes the greatest happiness, and the day closes with a deep sense of gratitude for every blessing, however small.

It is now stated that the Panama canal will cost more than three times the original estimates. The engineers say that the cost of labor and provisions is twice as much as originally, and the slides have added to the expenditures.

CLASHING STARS.

A Greenroom Quarrel In Which Marie Roze Triumphed.
Minnie Hauck and Marie Roze had quarreled over "Carmen." One night "The Marriage of Figaro" was announced, with Roze as Susanna and Hauck as Cherubino.
"At 3 o'clock that afternoon," writes Mr. Upton, "Hauck went into the theater and pre-empted the prima donna's room by depositing her things therein. An hour later Roze's maid reached the theater and proceeded to the same room, only to find it filled with the hated rival's traps. Roze notified the colonel (Henry Mapleson). He was promptly on the scene and began moving Hauck's belongings to the opposite room and instructing his wife to be at the theater precisely at 6.
"At half past 5, however, Hauck sent the chevalier (her husband) to the theater to see that everything was right. The chevalier found that everything was not right and ordered Roze's belongings to be removed, replaced his wife's and had everything, including the door, stoutly locked.
"At 6 Roze arrived, prepared to 'hold the fort,' but as she couldn't get into the fort to hold it she sent for the colonel, who sent for a locksmith, who opened the door. Hauck's things were unceremoniously bundled out. At half past 6 Hauck came to the room to dress, and, much to her surprise and to the chevalier's chagrin, Roze was in there calmly dressing. What passed between them probably no one will ever know, but Hauck went back to her hotel and notified the manager that she would not sing that evening. And she didn't."—Pearson's Weekly.

THE BOROBODOER.

A Hindoo Temple Built In Java In the Eighth Century.
The Borobodoer unearthed by Sir Stamford Raffles when the English ruled in Java was built by the Hindoos in the eighth century and is by far the finest example of their work in the island. Standing on a hill in the middle of the valley, this imposing edifice, covering nearly ten acres, rises to a height of upward of a hundred feet above the summit of the hill. It consists of a series of stone terraces built on top of each other in diminishing magnitude so as to leave circumscribing galleries and crowned by a vast cupola. Entrance to the galleries is gained by four stairways—north, south, east and west—which run from the ground straight up to the big top terraces, in the middle of which stands the crowning cupola, surrounded by numerous smaller latticework cupolas, from which one may step aside into any of the intermediate galleries.
The whole is built of stone, showing an immense amount of carving, and, though there is no genuine inside to the temple, many of the galleries are covered in, innumerable images of Buddha occupying niches or prominent positions on the walls, and the sides of the galleries were paved with bas-reliefs, indicating the glorification of this god and other incidents in his history. When one considers that there are several miles of bas-reliefs, alone the work expended on the pyramids of Egypt pales into insignificance before this stupendous undertaking.—Shanghai Mercury.

Wedding Horses.

An old fashioned man who wanted to hire a team for the afternoon saw a nice pair of bays which he thought he would like to drive.
"Can't let you have them," said the liveryman. "They are wedding horses."
"What's that?" asked the innocent pleasure seeker.
"Horses that won't shy at old shoes and showers of rice. Some horses seem prejudiced against matrimony. Anyhow they lose their temper if they happen to be hit by any of the good luck emblems that are fired after a bridal couple and run away if they get half a chance. Every livery stable, however, keeps two or more horses that take a more cheerful view of the wedded state. They may be literally pelted with old shoes without resenting it. Those bays are that kind. They are slated to head a wedding procession tonight and are resting up for the job."—New York Sun.

Bed Good Enough For Him.

"Son," called the farmer as the aroma of eggs and ham came up through the trapdoor, "why don't you get up?"
"What's the use?" yawned the college boy as he turned over for another nap. "Don't believe in early rising."
"Don't, eh? Well, how about the early bird?"
"Oh, that's a chestnut! The early bird caught the early worm, and the early cat caught the bird, and the early dog caught the cat, and the early dog catcher caught the dog. So there you are. What's the use of getting up early? It doesn't pay."—Chicago News.

Protecting Themselves.
